

I am opposed to the proposed plan to forcibly implant copy-protection technology in digital television receivers. The proposed regulation will limit the public's ability to use the broadcasts in legitimate, non-infringing ways. Also, as computers and television receivers continue to evolve and converge, this approach will inevitably lead to greater regulations imposed on PC companies and perhaps even operating system makers.